/SIG-fast/

Sigfast is the younger son of Knut Whitebear. His older brother, Skarti, is the leader of the Wolfborn, which is the main defense line of the huge hunting lodge, Hoelbrak. The brothers are great friends, but Sigfast has so far shown little interest in taking a leadership role, preferring to continue to sow the wild oats of youth.

Because of his somewhat wild nature (and Skarti's more high-strung, tightly wound temperament), the boys' father tends to send Sigfast on diplomatic missions to the other races. If there is going to be an incident at one of these events, Knut thinks it would be better if it involves alcohol instead of bloodshed.

Sigfast is supposedly the second-in-command of the Wolfborn to his elder brother, but he spends more time in the moot hall and on various "diplomatic" missions than in actual combat defending the hearthstead. Skarti and Knut both know that Sigfast will eventually grow out of his wild phase, and they are willing to let him enjoy his youth a little longer. Sigfast is more than willing to take life by the bottle and see where it will take him before he's forced to settle down and carry on the traditions of the family.

Character Traits: Young, boisterous, fun-loving

Reminds you of: A young Brian Blessed or Oliver Platt (both played Porthos)

Voice Quality: Loud, happy

Accent: None.

Sigfast

(First words out of his mouth upon greeting Logan at the Minister's party)

Who do you have to thump on around here to get some mead?

Sigfast

(Said when he's drunk and enjoying the adventure)

Onward. We will live large and die hard! Ha ha ha!

Sigfast

(When he's sobering up and needs another drink.)

Everything's so bright and sharp. I need to take the edge off.

Sigfast

(upon finding a gigantic wine cellar at the party)

This cellar could sate all of Hoelbrak for a month, or me for a week.
